General Course Information

What is development? What are some of the issues and challenges of development in developing countries? Why are some countries progressing and others not or much less so? Focusing on these basic questions, this course provides an introduction to issues in developing countries from an interdisciplinary point of view using the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs), which form the major current international development agenda, as a stepping-stone. Contemporary issues such as disease, hunger, education, and environmental sustainability will be discussed from a development perspective. Concepts such as poverty, famine, trade justice, debt, and gender are introduced and used as critical tools to assess major challenges to development in general, and the MDG agenda in particular. In weekly seminars, students explore the discussed issues through their own research and will use news clippings to explore current affairs in international development and to critically examine how our society thinks about development. Students are required to complete a major research project on a developmental issue in a developing country. Along the way, students will explore the problems of underdevelopment and will learn from one another about the challenges faced in particular regions of the developing world.

Required Textbooks

Annual Editions: Developing World 12/13 by Robert J. Griffiths

The Bottom Billion by Paul Collier

Additional Text Material

Primary course reading will be assigned from required textbooks. All other additional text material will be posted on eLearning or are available online. Students are not required to print material available electronically.

Course Objective

This course is designed to help students become familiar with the key dimensions of the development process and be able to critically evaluate current issues and problems experienced by the developing nations in their efforts to achieve economic and human development.

Complementary course goals are to practice and refine discussion, research, and writing skills. This class will be conducted as a seminar, which means that everyone will be expected to actively participate in discussions. Students must stay current on readings and be ready to contribute to class discussion.

Course Requirements

Class Participation and Attendance:

Class attendance is required. Students who failed to attend at least two-thirds of the classes without due cause will receive an F for this course. Participation will be evaluated and factored into the final grade. It is every student's obligation to consult the course eLearning several times a week for course updates and other announcements. Each student is expected to complete the required readings before class and to participate actively in class discussion. Class participation is measured by the quality of your thoughtful contributions to the class discussion.

Summaries: Every week you will be required to write a critical summary of the readings. You can choose to write either on Tuesday or Thursday, not both days. This should include a brief summary of the main arguments of the readings for that day, your critical reaction/thoughts, and at least one question for class discussion at the end. Keep in mind that these should be critical in nature, and not merely summaries of the key points in the day's readings. This should be a ½ to 1 page in length (font 12, single space). You are allowed two free weeks when you do not have to turn in a summary and you can choose when to take these free passes according to your schedule. In addition, there will not be a summary due on Week 1, Week 6, Week 8, Week 12 and Week 13. Thus, you will write a total of 8 summaries. Summaries submitted without attending class will not be graded. No late summaries will be accepted.

Exams: Students will have an essay/multiple choice midterm and a take home final exam.

Written Assignment: There will be a total of 4 written assignments: three movie reviews and a book review. More detail will be given in class.

Research Project: There will be one research paper of 8 pages in length due at the last day of class. The paper will be on a topic of your choice that involves a current developmental issue within one or more developing countries. The paper can be analytic or critical and should include a policy recommendation for the issue in question. The topic will need to be approved by the professor. The paper should state, defend or criticize an argument about the politics of some ongoing development issue. Examples of possible topics include: the debt crisis in the developing world, political reform in Iran, the AIDS crisis in Africa, democratization in the Middle East, Ebola outbreak in Africa, rebuilding Haiti, terrorism in Syria/Iraq, women empowerment, environmental crisis, urban violence, etc. The paper should use at least 8 scholarly sources. These are academic articles published in peer review journals or books written by PhDs. Among the library's databases, Project Muse and JSTOR contain primarily scholarly articles; Google Scholar (scholar.google.com) also shows results for scholarly articles searches.

There will be three stages to the research project:

Short assignment:

Provide me with a short summary of your progress due on October 1st. You will write a 1 page statement on the research idea of your choice related to the course themes in a particular developing country or region. It should include the following pieces:

What developing country or region will you be studying? What is your specific question (thesis)? Key to this description is to identify a developmental problem. Additionally, please include the following: statement of data progress & challenges (what data sources have you found? what difficulties are you encountering?) and a short statement of why your case is important (in other words, frame the relevance of your case to a broader audience).

Bibliography: On November 5th students should turn in a preliminary Bibliography page for the paper. This will not be your final Bibliography, but what you have read so far and plan to cite in your paper. Any format is fine (APA, MLA, or Chicago), just be consistent. Remember, you'll need at least 8 scholarly sources in the final Bibliography...

Research Paper: The research project will culminate in a research paper of 8 to 10 pages due on the last day of class, December 8th. See guideline at the end of syllabus.

Graded Activities:

Grading Scale:

	5%	Min	Max	Grade	Min	Max	Grade	Min	Max	Grade
Participation	5%
Weekly Summaries	15%	93.0	100.0	A	80.0	82.9	B-	67.0	69.9	D+
Written Assignments	20%	90.0	92.9	A-	77.0	79.9	C+	63.0	66.0	D
Midterm	20%	87.0	89.9	B+	73.0	76.9	C	60.0	62.9	D-
Research Paper	20%	83.0	86.9	B	70.0	72.9	C-	0.00	59.9	F
Final Exam	20%

Turnitin: All written assignments must be turn in on eLearning at the Turnitin link by the deadline. Also provide me with a printed copy for grading purposes at the end of class, or email it to me, by the due date and time.

e-Learning: E-learning is used a lot in this class. This is how I will communicate with you. You are responsible for announcements made through e-Learning. If you do not regularly check your utdallas email, select a forwarding email address in your email preferences.

Late policy: Written works are due on specified dates. Special arrangements for late midterm will be allowed only for reasons of personal health or family emergencies. You will need to provide a medical note or other proof of emergency. Since the final exam will be a taken home exam, no excuses will be accepted for it being late. Papers submitted late will be penalized one full grade per day after the deadline. I do provide a one hour grace period starting at the end of class and ending promptly at 2:00pm for you to submit your paper without it being penalized.

Technology policy: Technology both within and outside the classroom should enable your learning experience, not hinder it. Cell phones are to be turned off during our class. You will not need a computer for this class, but I do understand that some students prefer to take notes on theirs. If that is the case, you are required to seat in the front two rows. If you use the computer to surf the web on non-class related sites, know that you are doing so at your own risk. Bottom line: you are wasting valuable time. Be mindful of those seating behind you.

Classroom Citizenship: I expect students to be attentive during class and to actively participate in class discussion. You are expected to listen respectfully to me and to other students when speaking. Racism, sexism, homophobia, classism, ageism and other forms of bigotry are inappropriate to express in this class. We will discuss issues that require sensitivity and maturity, and I expect you to be respectful and polite to everyone. Disruptive students will be asked to leave and may be subject to disciplinary action.

University Policies

Information on university policies can be found at: <http://go.utdallas.edu/syllabus-policies>

Extra-Credit: Students may write a book review or a movie review of 5 pages on an approved book or movie. This paper is due on November 19th at 12:45pm in class. No late papers will be accepted. This is worth up to 3% of your final grade (A=3%, B=2%, C=1%, D or less=0%).

Outside of Classroom:

Students are also urged to gain broad exposure to the politics and economics of the developing world. Here are some places to look:

Guidelines for Writing Papers in this Class

Please read these Guidelines before writing your paper

You will write one analytical, critical, or positional research paper in this class (8-10 pages). These types of essays involve several arguments in support of a thesis. Your first, most important task is to pick a clear and specific thesis. Your purpose is to devote your essay to the development and support of this thesis. Hence, write out your thesis concisely. Doing so will clarify your thinking and help you sharpen the focus of the paper.

Your paper should begin with a statement of your thesis. Once you have formulated this thesis, you must justify your position. In the remainder of the essay, you will put together arguments, which do just that. Ask yourself such questions as: which issues are directly relevant to my thesis? Which parts of the readings (or lectures) might be relevant to this topic? How can I prove the validity of my statements?

A key to a good preparation is to look at the various sides of the issue (or issues). Thus, you will need to spend a lot of time researching and reading more about the issue in question. Make sure that you think about the most relevant facts involved, contemplate the most possible positions, understand the underlying beliefs that would affect this topic, and explain why your position is valid when making the policy recommendation.

Your supporting arguments should be arranged in such ways that they guide the readers to your conclusions. Once you have decided which evidence and which arguments you will use, be sure to order them so that the conclusions you draw are convincing.

Preparing your Argument – Initial Research

One of the best ways to decide on how to order your paper is to write down the arguments you will use to support your thesis prior to writing the paper. After you have done this, arrange your arguments so that they provide the most logically persuasive position. Then decide which passages from the readings can be used to support these claims. Note where this material will be incorporated into your paper.

Once you have collected your material and decided on both the thesis you wish to present and your arguments (as well as arguments of others-if you are writing a critical paper) make an outline. The outline will be a picture of the logical order of your essay. You will work out the final product from this summary outline.

Once you have a draft of the research paper ask yourself the following questions:

1. Is my thesis clearly stated? Is it valid within the context of the text?
2. Have I presented my arguments logically so that the reader can follow and understand them?

If you believe you have done so, you are ready to polish your writing style. But, do not forget the following:

Format:

1. Use MLA, APA, or Chicago Manual Style. A guideline can be found at: https://owl.english.purdue.edu/media/pdf/20110928111055_949.pdf
2. Use a 12 point font.
3. The text should be typed, double spaced, and have one-inch margins.
4. Do not add extra spaces between paragraphs.
5. Number the pages.
6. Include a title page with your name, course title, and date.
7. Include a bibliography.

Style:

1. Include an introduction and conclusion with appropriate outlines and summation of the main points of your paper.
2. Use topic sentences in your paragraphs. (Please – no two sentence paragraphs or two page paragraphs!)
3. Do not use a casual tone. (For example, do not use contractions such as “can’t,” “wouldn’t”, etc.)
4. Avoid speaking in the first person. (For example, “In this paper I will...”)
5. Spell check!!!!!!!!!!!!

Sources:

1. Use multiple sources. (You need at least 8 academic sources.)
2. You should have a combination of peer reviewed articles, books, and journals as sources.
3. As a supplement only you may use the Internet or conventional news sources (for example The Economist or the New York Times). They should not constitute the core of your research.
4. Cite often. An overabundance of citations is always preferable to too few. Cite as if you want the reader to be able to easily refer to your sources when you refer to facts, quotations, and interpretations.
5. If someone else says it, you must give credit to him or her. If you repeat the author verbatim, you must quote and cite the author. If you paraphrase his or her words, you must cite the author. Failure to do this is plagiarism.

Once you think are done:

1. Proofread your paper carefully for typing errors.
2. Revise each paragraph or essay at least twice. Never turn in your first draft.

Then, correct all grammatical errors, improve your sentence structure and prepare the final draft of your paper.

You may ask me any question regarding this paper and come see me at any time in my office hours or by appointment.

General Warning:

Scholastic dishonesty will be severely punished. The student will be subject to university disciplinary proceedings. Every semester I say this and every semester a student tries to get away with plagiarism. Look, I know the difference between an undergraduate's and a scholar's writing techniques/styles. And even if by some random reason your paper passed undetected, turnitin will getcha. I promise you that. So, please cite and cite often. The UTD Undergraduate Catalog defines scholastic dishonesty as the following: "Scholastic dishonesty includes, but is not limited to, statements, acts or omissions related to applications for enrollment or the award of a degree, and/or the submission as one's own work of material that is not one's own. As a general rule, scholastic dishonesty involves one of the following acts: cheating, plagiarism, collusion and/or falsifying academic records."
